

TEACHING ABOUT RELIGION

Upon all suitable occasions, instruction will be given in the principles of morality, virtue, and patriotism. Students will be taught to conduct themselves at all times in a courteous and respectful manner and helped to build up characters that will command the respect and confidence of all and fit them to become useful members of society. But no sectarian or partisan instruction will be allowed, and no book or tract designed to advocate the tenets of any particular sect or party will be permitted in any of the schools.

Adopted: January 24, 1994